Changing Lives

For the last five years I have worked with youth in the Grier Heights community. During that time, I have learned three powerful messages that build trust and cement our relationship: I see them. They matter. I am not going anywhere. The children of Grier Heights are accustomed to transiency and assume that people will give up on them. I love that I get to be the person that dispels that idea. I love that I get to be the one who empowers them to believe that anything is possible.
